Peninsula teens join pros at First Tee Open

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TWO STUDENTS from Robert Louis Stevenson School, a Pacific Grove High School senior and a freshman from Santa Catalina are among the nation's top junior golfers competing in this week's First Tee Open.

The tournament, which raises money for youth golf programs across the country, is unique in its pairing 78 juniors with 78 pros.

The final round of the event, which also includes 156 amateurs, will be televised on NBC Sunday afternoon.

"I volunteer at the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, so I get to overhear some of the pros' conversations, and I learn a lot from them," 16-year-old P.G. High senior Corinna Rees said. "But competing in The First Tee Open this year is going to be such a great thing."

At Tuesday night's pairings party at the Inn at Spanish Bay, Rees learned her partner will be Irish golf pro Des Smyth, who finished first in two events this year on the Champions Tour (formerly the Senior PGA Tour).

Chad Vivolo, a 17-year-old senior at Stevenson, played in the inaugural First Tee Open last year alongside Senior PGA Champion Mike Reid, who is also a longtime friend of Vivolo's father, David, the head pro at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club.

"It was awesome," he said. "He really had a lot of insight for me."

Vivolo will have the chance to solicit even more advice from Reid, as they have been paired again this year.

Ariana Patterson, a 14-year-old freshman at Santa Catalina, will play with Floridian David Eger, who also finished first at one of the events on this year's Champions Tour.

Mayors: Runoff policy needs common sense

By KELLY NIX

MONTEREY PENINSULA mayors told state water quality officials Wednesday that capturing storm runoff before it flows into Monterey Bay would place a financial strain on the cities' police, fire and other vital municipal programs.

The California Regional Water Quality Control Board issued a cease-and-desist order Feb. 11 that made it illegal for Carmel, Monterey, Pacific Grove and Pebble Beach to allow stormwater to run into the ocean.

"What I understand is being asked of us will take a tremendous amount of resources, mainly money," Monterey Mayor Dan Albert told board members at a California Ocean Plan Workshop at the Monterey Conference Center.

The state has designated some local waters "areas of special biological significance," or ASBS, which makes them off-limits to wastewater discharges, including water from storms, the board decided last year. Pollutants present in stormwater can have damaging effects on human health and aquatic ecosystems, the board contends. It has ordered that all wastewater discharges come to an end by 2008.

To comply with the order, Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove must build multimillion dollar storm drain systems that would prevent stormwater from running to the sea. There are thousands of storm drains throughout the Monterey Peninsula.

Albert said the millions it would cost to build such a system would affect police, fire and library funding.

Local cities could apply for a piece of the $43 million in tax revenue the state has allocated for the program, but Peninsula cities would have to bear the brunt of the costs.

"We want to do something, but we need time and money," said Pacific Grove Mayor Jim Costello.

Monterey City Manager Fred Meurer told board members the agency should first use any state funds for the highest-priority ASBS areas, such as Los Angeles.

"Allocate those dollars to the worst first," Meurer said. "As opposed to dribbling out the dollars and making cities feel they can't meet those obligations."

Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud said her city feels caught in a quandary because the California Coastal Commission encourages Carmel to allow for more coastal access while

475 buses and 7 million MREs

■ Carmel man at eye of storm relief

By MARY BROWNFIELD

'I'M ABSOLUTELY buried at this point and will be for days," Corey Nygaard, emergency services director of the Red Cross' Carmel chapter, id Wednesday from the Federal Emergency Management Agency headquarters in Washington, D.C. Even before Hurricane Katrina hit New Orleans Monday, he was was working long days coordinating mass care efforts for what were expected to be thousands of victims, but turned out to hundreds of thousands.

"We're dealing with things we never thought we'd deal with: The scope and scale, the sheer number of people in shelters, the need of food and water, and people are still stranded in evacuation areas," he said.

Nygaard, a Red Cross veteran and highly trained mass-care coordinator who has responded to more than 45 disasters in the United States and abroad, helped find 475 buses to carry refugees locate the Superdome in ravaged New Orleans — where drinking water, power and food are scarce to nonexistent — to the Astrodome in Houston.

He managed to procure 7 million MREs — military meals ready to eat — for storm victims and has spent his days talking to aid agencies, government officials and contractors to arrange food and shelter for an as-yet-unknown number of victims.

"The Department of Defense is the only one that has that number of MREs — there's not a contract vendor anywhere that has that in stock — so they're being brought in from two military installations," he said. Those are

Chesshire outlines plan to reclaim seat

By KELLY NIX

RON CHESSHIRE, a former director with the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, said he intends to campaign hard to reclaim the seat he lost four years ago.

Chesshire, 54, a business representative for Carpenters Union Local 605, served one term on the water board before losing to Judi Lehman in 2001 in an election with a meager 25 percent turnout. Voters stayed away from the polls not only because it was it an off-year election, but because it came less than two months after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

"I'm going to step things up," Chesshire said of his campaign. "I'm going to take it to voters as to why Judi and I are different as individuals."

School board challengers says academics get short shrift at CHS

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TWO INCUMBENTS on the Carmel Unified School District's board of education are being challenged in the November election by candidates who say the board doesn't put enough emphasis on academics, particularly at Carmel High, which has long had lower test scores than similar high schools around the state.

The four candidates agree academic standards need to be raised, and each believes he is the best man for that job.

Newcomers Lewis Leader and Richard Kreitman hope to unseat board veterans Dr. Dan Hightower and Howard Given.

Lewis Leader

A longtime journalist turned public relations man, Leader "has closely watched the district for many years" while his only daughter, Samara, attended Carmel schools (except the four years the family lived elsewhere) and graduated from CHS in June.

"I've never run for political office and decided to try to share some of the things I've learned and rectify some of the things I am concerned about," Leader said. "There's a need for some fresh thinking."

He said he believes the district should better reward teachers' creativity and foster innovation, and he called for a greater emphasis on academic achievement.

"Each of the schools in the district is quite important, but I think the high school is where the final product of the CUSD program emerges, and those four years are extremely important," he said. "Sometimes there is not sufficient appreciation of academics and academic achievement at the high school."

Sports have their place, according to Leader, who assists with coaching the junior varsity baseball team and also umpires in youth games in Carmel and Carmel Valley. But he said they should not distract from academics.

Leader said he was heartened by the board's support last Monday night of three objectives outlined by CUSD Superintendent Marvin Biasotti:

- Increase student learning as evidenced by test scores that put the schools in the top 10 percent, compared with similar schools, by 2008;
- "provide superior educational facilities and ensure all classrooms and schools are safe, secure and nurturing places for students and staff;" and
- increase district efficiency and effectiveness.

Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., Leader grew up there and in Los Angeles. He studied history at University of California, Berkeley and first moved to the Monterey Peninsula in 1972 to write for the Monterey County Herald. He worked as a reporter, city editor and managing editor until 1994. He opened his own public relations firm four years ago and has also taken seven graduate school courses in education at Chapman University. He said his career included negotiating contracts and analyzing budgets as well.

Leader and his wife, Sandra, live in Carmel Valley.

Scenic Road repair may begin Tuesday — if emergency permit is issued by somebody

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE MONTEREY County Public Works Department hopes to start repair work by Sept. 6 on a section of Scenic Road near Carmel Point that has been closed since early August. But before the rehabilitation begins, the California Coastal Commission will need to determine if the repair work falls under its jurisdiction.

"Nothing has been proposed to us yet," explained Kelly Cuffe, a planner for the state coastal watchdog agency. "We're still waiting for the details."

According to Cuffe, a project that occurs above the mean high tide line could fall under the county's jurisdiction. But she declined to comment on the proposed repair work "because no project has been defined."

Vic Lewis, public works interim maintenance manager, also isn't sure if the project falls under the coastal commission's jurisdiction, but he's not taking any chances.

"We are going to go ahead and apply for a permit through the coastal commission," Lewis said. "It could be above the mean high tide mark, and that would change things. But I think we are still going to need a permit, so we're going to go ahead and send the application over. Either way, we anticipate starting on Sept. 6."

Besides figuring out whom to ask for a permit, public works staff members have been busy with a Carmel Valley Road maintenance project.

Lewis estimated the damaged portion of Scenic Road near Carmel Point will remain closed until the third week of September.

A small section of Scenic Road failed Aug. 6, when a 20-year-old repair utilizing concrete bags collapsed. Since then, motorists have been required to take a detour around Dead Man's Curve, a prominent landmark that offers sweeping views of Point Lobos and Carmel Bay. Traffic is being rerouted through an adjacent residential neighborhood.

To protect the road against a future collapse, earth anchors will be drilled into the existing topsoil. A rebar framework will be tied to the anchors, and a wire mesh will help hold the concrete in place.

All good things in moderation

By Steve Leonard

Monterey Peninsula residents are the leaders in wise water use over almost every major community in the United States.

Despite community efforts – and near-record rainfall early in the year – the need to conserve remains with us.

Why? Nearly 70 percent of local water comes from the Carmel River or wells that draw from the Carmel Valley Aquifer. These have been the principal sources of water on the Peninsula for over a century.

In 1995, the State of California issued an order mandating an immediate 20 percent reduction in water usage and requiring California American Water find a permanent replacement water supply for the Carmel Valley Aquifer. Failure to comply could result in steep fines to Peninsula water users.

To further complicate matters, the Carmel River is home to the Central Coast California Steelhead Trout and the California Red Legged Frog, both of which are listed as threatened under the Federal Endangered Species Act.

Every gallon of water that stays in the river reduces the need for water rationing and improves survival chances for these and other threatened species.

Using Water Wisely

California American Water has demonstrated its commitment in this area over the last several years by sponsoring a variety of water conservation programs that stress the importance of maximizing our water resources to protect the environment.

In addition, the California American Water team works with volunteer groups to rescue and relocate Steelhead Trout along the river.

California American Water has distributed more than 43,000 free water saving devices to help Peninsula residents reduce indoor and outdoor water consumption.

Working with our customers, we have seen a 30 percent reduction in the volume of water drawn from the Carmel River and a 37 percent decline in total per capita water usage since 2001.

Steve Leonard is Vice President & Manager of California American Water

That is an impressive track record, and we salute our customers for their hard work. However, the only way we can "guarantee" enough water for everyone and protect the Carmel River is by creating a new water supply.

That's what California American Water is doing with the Coastal Water Project, a proposed desalination plant.

A Sustainable Water Supply

After years of research, careful analysis and input by an independent team of experts, California American Water has identified a cost-effective, sustainable and environmentally friendly solution to the water challenge on the Monterey Peninsula.

The Coastal Water Project is the right project at the right time and solves what Peninsula residents realize is a very serious problem. It is in its early stages, but progress happens every day.

Until we have solved Monterey's water shortage, moderation remains the key to ensuring a stable water supply. The more we work together to stay within strict water limits, the greater the benefits to you, our wildlife and our environment. We thank you for your support.

If you would like additional water conservation information, free water saving devices or details, please email us at monterey@amwater.com or call (888) 237-1333.

Scenic Road home hit by popcorn vandals

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department, the Carmel Fire Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Brownfield.

SUNDAY,AUGUST 21

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject warned for sleeping in her vehicle while it was parked on Monte Verde Street.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Traffic collision on public property on Ocean Avenue. Property damage only.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subjects contacted concerning a disagreement in the bar of a hotel on Lincoln Street. Management requested the subjects not return. Subjects advised. No further problems.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to a reported vehicle accident, car vs. motorcycle at Ocean and Torres. On scene, crews assessed a 50-year-old male who had minor contact with a vehicle and fell on his motorcycle, claimed no injuries, refused further medical treatment and signed a medical release.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine, ambulance and battalion chief responded to a reported hazardous condition at San Carlos and Seventh. On scene, water with a small amount of grease was discovered running from a curb drain along the sidewalk adjacent to the market. The substance was traced to a patio drain in the rear of a restaurant in a neighboring courtyard. Workers at the restaurant were contacted and advised of washing materials into area drains that lead to gutters or storm drains. The area adjacent to the sidewalk was rinsed with approximately 20 gallons of water to remove the substance and odor. Carmel police officers also responded and contacted the two restaurants that could be responsible, but both denied involvement. Due to a shared sewer system, it was impossible to tell who was responsible. Both restaurant managers were counseled and agreed to be more careful in the future.

Pebble Beach: A 37-year-old male suspect and a female subject were involved in a heated argument in the parking lot near the Inn at Spanish Bay. The male physically assaulted the female by hitting her in the face several times with a closed fist. The male suspect left the scene in the victim's car.

Carmel Valley: At 0045 hours, a 20-year-old male Carmel Valley resident was driving his 1997 Acura Integra at a high rate of speed eastbound on Carmel Valley Road east of Cachagua Road. He attempted to pass a slower-moving vehicle and lost control. His vehicle spun off the south roadway edge and collided with a large oak tree, causing major intrusion to the driver's door. The vehicle came to rest on the south shoulder of Carmel Valley Road. He ws pronounced dead at the scene. Traffic on Carmel Valley Road was reduced to one lane for approximately three hours. The county coroner's office will conduct an autopsy to determine the cause of death.

MONDAY, AUGUST 22

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Suspects disturbed the peace at Monte Verde and 10th at 0746 hours.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A report was made of a possible sick raccoon behind a business on Dolores Street. The raccoon was located and captured. The raccoon was then transported to the SPCA Wildlife department.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female reported that on Saturda, Aug. 20, at about 1700 hours, she was attending a show in the area of Mission Street and Seventh Avenue. She parked her car on Mission Street and placed her wallet under the driver's seat. She then left the car. She was unsure if the vehicle was locked or not. When she returned to the car at approximately 2000 hours, she felt for the wallet but could not find it. She said she looked for the wallet everywhere but could not locate it. She added that she will look throughout her car and house again to try to locate it.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Traffic collision on public property on Torres Street. Property damage only.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject reported after-hours construction occurring at Carmel Plaza at 1914 hours. The job foreman was contacted and cited for the construction violation. It should be noted that three warnings have been issued in the past two weeks.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine, ambulance and battalion chief responded to report of a natural gas leak at a residence at Camino Real and 10th. At scene, found the residential feed

Masked gunman robs four C.V. bank tellers and one customer

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A YOUNG white man held up a Carmel Valley bank Monday afternoon, pointing a semiautomatic pistol at four tellers and a customer and demanding cash, according to Monterey County Sheriff's Sgt. Doug Dahmen of the robbery/homicide division.The suspect made off with an undisclosed amount and jumped into a Dodge Neon waiting behind a nearby shopping center.

The man walked into the Washington Mutual Bank at 2 p.m. Aug. 29 wearing a surgical mask and carrying the gun. "He didn't stand in line and wait for his turn to notify the teller," Dahmen said, but instead demanded all four tellers place the cash from their tills on the counter and remove any dye packets designed to explode when money is stolen. He loaded the money into a dark-colored bag.

"When he approached the first teller, there was a customer attempting to deposit some money, and he took that money as well as the money from the teller," Dahmen said.

An employee triggered a silent alarm, and several witnesses dialed 911 on their cellphones.

"One of the tellers was on the phone to his wife when this robber walked in, and he indicated to her he had to go because the bank was being robbed," Dahmen added. She also called 911.

The man left with an undisclosed amount of cash, and several people followed him to the rear of Mid-Valley Shopping Center, where a waiting driver picked him up in an old, white, four-door Dodge Neon.

"The suspect pointed his pistol at the citizen/witnesses and threatened to shoot them," according to the sheriff's report. Someone told deputies the man had fired the gun, but Dahmen said interviews at the scene showed that to be untrue.

Witnesses and bank surveillance tape indicated the suspect wore a dark blue hooded sweatshirt, dark Dickies pants, black shoes and gloves with stripes running down the fingers. He wore sunglasses and a surgical mask over his nose and mouth to hide his face, but the mask slipped at one point to only cover his mouth, revealing a narrow face and red, possibly sunburned skin. He was described as 20 to 30 years old, 160 pounds and 5 feet 8 inches tall. His voice had a Midwestern twang, and the blue-black handgun might have been a .45-caliber Colt.

Sheriff's detectives, forensic evidence technicians and an FBI special agent are investigating. Dahmen said he is also trying to determine whether Monday's robbery has any ties with a similar incident in April, during which a masked gunman described as 5 foot 8 to 5 foot 11 inches tall and weighing 160-180 pounds robbed the bank and fled.

Dahmen commended the bank employees for managing the situation well, including acquiescing when the man demanded money.

"They came out of it unscathed physically, which was a significant achievement given someone was in there with a firearm robbing the bank," he said.

He asked anyone with any information to call detective Dave Luna at (831) 755-3772 or the Sheriff's Tip Line at (888) 833-4847.

City's insurance won't fix house undermined by failed storm drain

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CITY of Carmel's insurance carrier won't cover repairs to a 10th Avenue house damaged in March when a storm drain failed, turning the front yard into a sink hole and causing the home to lean. Noël Beutel had believed the city would pay for the needed structural work.

"St. Paul Travelers left me a message. She said, 'We will not be covering this claim, because we had no prior knowledge. As soon as we knew the drain had failed, we repaired it,'" Beutel said. "I was hoping for them to fix the foundation — to jack it back up — because the house is lopsided."

The storm drain underneath her property suddenly collapsed in heavy rains the afternoon of March 25, taking with it much of her front yard. A rushing stream developed underneath the brick walkway and steps to her front door, and the porch began to pull away from the wall.

Public works crews fixed the failed drain, back-filled collapsed areas with cement and restored the landscaping on the city easement that runs in front of the house. The brick walkway was also repaired.

"The city has been wonderful — they came out and planted plants and brought in dirt," she said, adding that she believed that indicated the city was taking responsibility for the failed drain.

She asked Grice Engineering and Geology to determine the extent of the damage to her home and solicited repair estimates from two other firms.

Lawrence Grice determined the house "showed severe settlement and some stress," and concluded the shift occurred rapidly as a result of "the subsurface erosion of the adjacent soils by the corroded storm drain."

One contractor advised Beutel her front porch "is in imminent danger of collapse."

"If I lean on the front porch, it will fall off," she said this week. "I can't close my patio door, because the house has shifted so much." The front door sticks as well.

Fearing higher rates, a homeowner doesn't want to ask her own carrier to pay

Removing and repairing the front porch, shoring up the foundation, adding bracing and other necessary work would run $88,000 to $106,000, according to the contractors' estimates.

Beutel filed her claim for damages with the city and received notice in May that it had been referred to the insurance company. She began calling weekly to find out the status of her case, and on Aug. 25, she said the company concluded the city was not liable because it had no knowledge the drain would collapse. (According to state law, in most cases municipalities are only liable for hazards they are aware of.)

With the next logical step a lawsuit, Beutel has called lawyers, but each wants a minimum $10,000 retainer, she said. Having been out of work for a year undergoing chemotherapy and radiation for breast cancer, Beutel said she can't afford it.

"And I don't want to have to do that," she said. "I love Carmel, and I don't want to have to go to an attorney and file a lawsuit."

She also doesn't want to submit a claim on her homeowner's insurance, because she believes any resulting payoff would subject her to increased premiums and could cause her to lose coverage altogether. But she admitted she might have no other option.

Beutel said she was "devastated" by the bad news from St. Paul Travelers.

"I was almost hysterical, but that's not going to do me any good," she said. "I've got to pull myself together and figure out the next step."

Are space age two-wheelers too dangerous for Monterey Rec trail?

By CHRIS COUNTS

WITH ITS quirky and futuristic design, the Segway looks like it rolled out of a Jetsons cartoon. Some call it cute, while others says it's goofy.

The Monterey City Parks and Recreation Commission has little interest in what a Segway looks like. At a Sept. 15 hearing, the commission will try to determine how well the electric-powered Segways are coexisting with the crowds of walkers, runners and bicyclists who use the Monterey Bay Recreation Trail.

After listening to public testimony, the commission will make a recommendation to the Monterey City Council, which is scheduled to consider the issue at its Oct. 4 meeting. In June, the city council voted 3-2 to allow a new business, Segway By The Sea, to operate on Cannery Row for a three-month trial period that ends in September.

Greg Von Lortz, co-owner of Segway-by-the-Sea, takes a spin on a Segway, an electric-powered "human transporter."

Greg Von Lortz, co-owner of Segway By The Sea, will try to convince the commission that fears about the safety of Segways are overblown. Billed as "human transporters," Segways can only travel about eight miles per hour. Ironically, Von Lortz broke his back and nearly lost his life in a horrific motorcycle racing accident less than two years ago.

"I'm still on two wheels," joked Von Lortz. "I'm just moving slower now."

According to Von Lortz, his business has rented more than 800 Segways since June without any reported injuries.

"Can I crash on a Segway? Absolutely," he said. "A Segway is only going to be as safe as the person who's driving it."

With the proper instruction, just about anybody can operate a Segway safely, insisted Von Lortz. He requires all his customers to participate in a 20-minute training seminar before they hit the pavement.

Von Lortz cites the high cost of a Segway (nearly $5,000) as another deterrent against reckless operators.

"This is not a thrill craft," he said. "Not even renters do it to wreak havoc."

But when they rent one, they end up spending money at other local business, Von Lortz said.

"Segways are becoming a destination attraction," he said.

Despite Von Lortz's assurances, Mayor Dan Albert and city councilman Jeff Haferman voted against allowing the three-month trial back in June. While Haferman said he still has his doubts about Segways, he is willing to look at the issue with an open mind.

"After the initial approval [of the trial period], the city council received a lot of feedback from people who didn't want motorized transportation of the recreation trail," said Haferman, an avid cyclist. "I haven't heard a lot of feedback, pro or con, since then."

Technically, a Segway is not considered motorized transportation — a state law defines "pedestrians" to include users of an "electric personal assistance mobility device." Still, Haferman is uneasy about the precedent the city council could set by allowing Segways on the recreation trail

"Where do you draw the line?" he asked. "I was at Venice Beach recently, and I saw a sail-powered skateboard. I'm wondering if at some point someone will ask to bring one of those things on the recreation trail."

Haferman said he is still willing to consider supporting the use of Segways on the recreation trail.

"I want to hear what the public has to say," he said. "The recreation trail is a real asset in our community. We want to do our best to keep it the treasure that it is."

Von Lortz said he is well aware how important the recreation trail is to local residents.

"If there is one thing the people of Monterey love more than their otters, it's the recreation trail," he said.

Who will protect your interests?
Who will be sure you are within budget?
Who will keep your project on schedule?

Most commercial and municipal owners realize they need this type of representation, even on projects that cost less than yours.

Doesn't it seem wise for you to do the same?

Researchers to shed light on what bats 'see' in Carmel Valley

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE IMAGE of bats — in books and movies and on late-night TV — is not flattering.

Skulking in dark places and baring its fangs when the moon is full, the stereotypical bat has long been a protagonist in nightmares and scary campfire stories.

"Bats get bad press," explained Cynthia Perrine, president of the non-profit Wildlife Society and organizer of a bat workshop at the Hastings Natural History Reservation Sept. 8-11. "But they are an integral part of our ecosystem."

How important are bats? According to Bat Conservation International, a non-profit group in Austin, Texas, dedicated to preserving bats and their habitats, most of the more than 1,100 species of bats that exist are highly beneficial.

"People in the agricultural business are beginning to realize what a difference the presence of bats can make," said Barbara French, a spokesperson for BCI. "More bats means less pesticides."

A single brown bat can catch about 1,200 mosquito-sized insects in just one hour. A colony of 150 bats can protect nearby farmers from more than 30 million root worms each summer. And the approximately 20 million Mexican free-tail bats that live in the famous Bracken Cave near San Antonio, Texas, eat about 200 tons of insects nightly.

Tequila lovers, in particular, owe bats a large debt of gratitude: Tequila is produced from agave plants whose seed production becomes almost nonexistent without bat pollinators.

Even bat droppings, a seemingly useless and noxious bat byproduct, benefit humans. The droppings support entire ecosystems of organisms, including bacteria useful in detoxifying wastes, improving detergents, and producing gasohol and antibiotics.

Vilified in movies and books, but very beneficial in the real world

"Bats have a great economic value to humans all over the world," said French.

Despite their obvious beneficial qualities, bat populations appear to be losing the battle against development and ignorance. Unfortunately, because of their affinity for the dark, researchers studying them are often left in the dark, literally.

"We don't know how endangered they are," admitted Perrine. "We need more data."

That's why researchers participate in events such as next week's workshop. By sharing and improving research methods, they hope to to shed a light on an elusive and much-misunderstood member of the animal kingdom.

Located on Carmel Valley Road about 26 miles east of Highway 1, Hastings offers scientists about 2,000 acres of gently sloping, oak and grass-covered California countryside where, as the glow of the sunset fades, researchers will eavesdrop on bats emerging from their day's sleep.

"We'll set up microphones and record the chirps bats emit to bounce off objects to decide whether they're something they should be eating or something they should be flying around," Perrine said.

The researchers, like the bats they are analyzing, have to resort to senses other than sight to help figure out how this process of echolocation works.

"Bats have always been one of the least studied mammals," explained French. "There are many people who still believe that bats are blind, and they can somehow get caught in your hair. And it seems like the less people understand something, the more they tend to fear it."

For more about bats, visit www.batcon.org. For more about Hastings, visit www.hastingsreserve.org.

The workshop next week is not open to the public.

Cody carries Carmel cop to three bronzes in police and fire games

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHEN SHE'S not working, Carmel Police Officer Rachelle Lightfoot is riding.

She took three bronze metals on her quarter horse, Cody, in the Western States Police & Fire Games held in Sparks, Nev., July 23-30. The only Carmel police officer to compete in the games in the last decade, Lightfoot said she "wanted to put Carmel back on the map."

"I've always wanted to do the police and fire games but never had an opportunity," said Lightfoot, who joined Carmel P.D. in October 2003 and lives in Prunedale. Her husband, Ryan, also rides, often with the Monterey County Sheriff's Posse and in parades, and Cody lives on their property.

"My husband would never be caught in an English saddle," said Lightfoot, who competes in English and Western classes. Her 6-year-old horse, however, "goes both ways."

Lightfoot entered one Western class, reining, and two English classes, hunter hack and equitation.

Reining showcases the athletic ability of a horse as the rider works him through a series of small slow circles, large fast circles, 360-degree spins in place and other moves, as well as the sliding stops that are the hallmark of the reining horse. Contestants are judged for technical and stylistic elements in light of the degree of difficulty.

Hunter hack involves taking the horse on a set course within the arena that includes two fences between 2 feet and 2 feet 9 inches tall, and judges evaluate the horse-and-rider team. In English equitation, judges focus on the rider's form.

The hunter hack competition posed the greatest challenge.

"They set the jumps up in a different way than we were used to, and they were higher than we were used to," Lightfoot said. "And they had a stereo blaring right by the fences. I wasn't sure he was going to jump them, but he went right through."

She also thought the more "English-type" thoroughbreds, which tend to be taller and more elegant in stature, might win the judges' praise over her quarter horse, so she was pleased with a bronze medal.

"It was a really good event geared toward police and fire, and everyone was really supportive," she said. "And more officers need to attend — I think they would enjoy the experience."

Lightfoot was delighted to meet and ride with like-minded cops and firefighters.

"We got a wonderful reception, and I met a lot of other officers who share my interest in horses," she said. "It was neat to compete against people who have the same complications you do: They work all the time and have to juggle family responsibilities."

Lightfoot began riding at age 8 and was "born loving horses," but she had to wait until adulthood to take on the costs and responsibilities of owning a horse. She rides and trains four or five times a week, in addition to competing. The couple plans to buy another horse next spring.

"All I do is horses and work," she said.

Carmel Police Officer Rachelle Lightfoot rides Cody the quarter horse for a bronze medal at the Western States Police & Fire Games in Sparks, Nev.

Girlfriend suspected of battering boyfriend

A 20-YEAR-OLD woman was arrested Sunday for allegedly beating her boyfriend as the couple fought in their room at the Dolphin Inn in downtown Carmel. Mary Raabe of Renton, Wash., was taken to Monterey County Jail by Carmel police officers who responded to the report of a domestic dispute in a hotel room at 1 a.m. Aug. 28, according to Carmel Police Sgt. Mel Mukai.

"She punched him and scratched him along his neck and facial regions," Mukai said. The victim, whose identity and age were shielded under the California Penal Code, told police his girlfriend was the aggressor.

Both had been drinking, but not to the point of intoxication, according to Mukai. They were in town for the victim's brother's wedding held Saturday.

Contractor cited for working long hours

POLICE CITED a contractor last Monday night for working too late at Carmel Plaza after warning him on three prior occasions during the past two weeks, but Shawn McNally of Craven Landscaping said he had to work the long hours to meet a project deadline, according to Carmel Police Sgt. Mel Mukai.

The Carmel Municipal Code allows construction only between 8 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Officer Rachelle Lightfoot was dispatched to the Carmel Plaza, which is undergoing an extensive remodel, at 7:15 p.m. Aug. 22 after someone reported workers were still there. Mukai said they were laying pavers.

"She spoke to the foreman, and he basically admitted he knew, he was warned in the past of that situation, but he just needed to meet a deadline," Mukai said.

The violation is an infraction punishable by a fine. Mukai could not say what the fine would be.

TomatoFest returns to Carmel Valley

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

HEIRLOOM TOMATOES, with funky names like Marvel Stripe and Black Krim, have made their way from backyard gardens to mainstream markets.

Despite the tomatoes' odd shapes, unexpected colors and cosmetic flaws, shoppers have shown they're willing to pay top dollar for these delicious beauties.

And Gary Ibsen, founder and director of Carmel TomatoFest and author of the Great Tomato Book (Ten Speed Press), has turned his passion for heirloom tomatoes into a profession and an annual fundraising event that attracts 2,500 heirloom enthusiasts from more than 30 states and six countries.

"Tomato Gary" grows 500 varieties of certified organic heirloom tomatoes which he distributes to local restaurants and markets under the brand name TomatoFest Farms. More than 350 varieties from around the world will be available for tasting at this year's TomatoFest and, as always, the Farmer's Market will offer fresh heirloom tomatoes and hard-to-find tomato seeds.

Ibsen encourages consumers to keep an eye out for several varieties that are especially good this year, including the newly named Clint Eastwood's Rowdy Red, Black Plum, Amish Gold, Black Zebra, Dagma's Perfection, God Love and German Johnson.

Last week, with just days to go until the Sept. 11 event, Ibsen announced the winners of the International Tomato Recipe Contest.

Jerry Regester, executive sous chef at The Lodge at Pebble Beach, took home the Professional Grand Prize and $5,000 cash for his Heirloom Tomato BLT Soup, while Diane Sparrow of Osage, Iowa, took the Amateur Grand Prize (a four-day Carmel vacation, including airfare and VIP tickets to TomatoFest) for her Sweet Tomato Pie in Nutmeg Crust.

More than 60 of America's finest chefs will be on hand at this year's TomatoFest to

With the TomatoFest its 14th year, Ibsen still works hard to improve upon what Sunset Magazine has called, "The perfect harvest party."

This year, Ibsen invited 50 of California's most renowned artists and photographers to create and donate their art for a silent auction, "Sirens of the Garden — The Tomato as Art." Proceeds will be donated to several children's charities.

"This is one of the best family events of the year," said Ibsen, who talked passionately about his delight at watching children try new tomato varieties at his event. There will also be live music and dancing under the summer's sky.

The 14th annual Carmel TomatoFest will be held Sunday, Sept. 11, at Quail Lodge in Carmel Valley. Tickets are $85 per person. Children under 12, with adult, will be admitted free. For more information, visit www.tomatofest.com or call (800) 965-4827.

Heirloom tomatoes for beginners

The most common definition of an heirloom tomato is any tomato variety that is not a hybrid and has been in cultivation for at least 50 years.

With so many obscure heirloom tomato varieties in the markets, most people need some help sorting them out. Here's a small sampling of the tomatoes you're likely to find at your local farmer's markets and grocery stores:

■ Black Krim: Originally from the coastal region of Black Sea in the former Soviet Union. 4-inch, slightly flattened mahogany-colored fruit with deep green shoulders and a beautiful green gel around the seeds. Fantastic taste.

■ Brandywine: The cover girl of tomatoes, it has a classic beefsteak shape and deep pink to red color. One of the best-known heirlooms, it is reputed to be an Amish variety dating to the 1880s. Generous soft flesh with a lightly sweet flavor that one taster described as muted.

■ Cherokee Purple: Large, deep-pink tomato with slightly ridged shoulders that shade to purple and green stripes in the flesh. Grown in Tennessee for more than 100 years. Intense, lingering flavor with a balance of sugar and acid.

■ Green Zebra: Widely popular among California chefs, this 2-inch, round fruit ripens to a yellow-gold with dark green, zebra-like stripes. The flesh is lime-emerald in color that has an invigorating lemon-lime flavor. A great tomato for brightening up salads and other tomato dishes.

■ Marvel Stripe: This tomato can top 2 pounds and is best known for its gorgeous yellow flesh striped with red. Scarring at the blossom end is common. Mild and sweet with moderate acid levels and a touch of citrus. Extremely large fruits can taste watery.

Broadway's 'Beast' comes to the outdoor stage

By DEBORAH SHARP

WHEN DISNY released the rights to its current hit, "Beauty and the Beast," Pacific Repertory was chosen to produce the Central Coast premiere of the fairy tale which has become the sixth longest running show on Broadway.

The local production, directed by Walt de Faria, meets the challenge of bringing the Broadway musical to the Forest Theater. The simple outdoor setting is the perfect backdrop for the handsome set, astounding costumes and solid talent assembled for the show.

Inventive costumes show how the beast's servants are caught up in an evil spell. Only if he falls in love can they become human again.

This classic tale of arrogance and anger (in the form of a prince-turned-beast) transformed by love (in the form of a simple peasant girl) has been updated by Disney. The lovely young maiden, Belle, is the spirited daughter of a slightly eccentric inventor, Maurice. Father and daughter are hoping to escape their provincial existence in a small village by cashing in on Maurice's clever inventions. In the meantime, Belle is wasting no time on simple country amusements and local suitors. She spends much of her time reading, which wins her the derision of the villagers and the ardent pursuit of one Gaston, a pumped-up Elvis look-alike with a massive ego and a mind firmly entrenched in the gutter.

In another part of the forest, in a mighty castle, resides the Beast, a prince who made the mistake of scorning a beautiful sorceress disguised as an old crone. For his arrogance, he was turned into a hideous beast by a spell that can only be reversed by the love of a maiden. Needless-to-say, the Beast and his enchanted retinue, who are slowly turning into household objects, have been languishing for years and are beginning to give up hope.

Kay Akervik brings to the role of Belle a good singing voice and the spirit of a young woman who knows exactly what she wants. But Belle's ambitions are tempered by a kind and generous heart, and Akervik embodies the spirit and the compassion winningly. Ron Cohen, her father Maurice, has the slightly distracted air of an absent-minded inventor who dotes on his beautiful daughter. Unfortunately Cohen's voice isn't strong, and it isn't helped by the unreliable sound system, but he's got an endearing way about him. J. T. Holm-strom plays the overblown Gaston with style. He's delightfully obnoxious with his "pourquoi" (when he means "pour vous"), and his invitation to Belle, "Bumpkin, extend with me," which is his idea of luring her into matrimony by offering her with the chance to bear his heirs. Belle is spared this dubious fate when her father bumbles into the Beast's territory, and she goes in search of him, but for a time it seems that she's surely met a fate worse than being Gaston's wife.

When Belle comes upon the Beast's castle, she finds an engaging group of inmates: Cogsworth (Ken Cusson), the head of the household who is slowly turning into a grandfather clock; Lumiere (Harrison Shields), the butler who is morphing into a candelabra; Babette (Lynette Graves), the coquettish housemaid becoming a dust mop; the motherly cook, Mrs. Potts (Nancy Williams) who's a tea pot with her young son, Chip, the teacup (Lana Richards), in tow; and Wardrobe (Malinda DeRouen), the former opera star who has become her own clothes closet. The costumes Tandy Messenger fashioned for this crew are astonishing. She's managed to create in three dimensions the animated characters Disney's movie crew only had to draw. If nothing else about this production tempts you, go for the delight of the costumes. But each of these characters is charmingly portrayed, as well as costumed, as they wrestle with their mutual problem: how to get the Beast to fall in love.

The Beast, alternately played by Justin Gordon and Josh McChesney, was portrayed by Gordon the night this reviewer saw the play. Gordon makes a fine Beast whom we see at first as only loathsome with his matted mane of hair, stubby horns and ghoulish face. He's got a temper to match his appearance and a lopping, wolfish gait as he prowls his castle. The script allows little time for the Beast's change from monster to man, but Gordon manages the shift gracefully through heartfelt song and small changes in demeanor as he allows himself to respond to Belle, and she warms to him. He wins our hearts the night Belle invites him to dine with her, and he struggles to play the suitor even though he hasn't quite got the hang of sitting in a chair and scratches his mane. All that is forgotten when Belle asks him to dance and together they circle the stage.

The production is enhanced by a large cast of villagers and objects in the Beast's castle: plates, cutlery, a rug, a pair of salt and pepper shakers, napkins and much more. All have undergone Messenger's costume magic and de Faria's thorough rehearsing to form a well coordinated, visually pleasing whole. The cast is rounded out by strong performances by Sam Skemp as LaFou (Gaston's sidekick) and Keith Decker as D'Arque (the roguish warden of the local asylum who teams up with Gaston to put Maurice away).

There is no stand-out singing, and the small band of musicians, led by Stephen Tosh, sounds a little thin, but overall the music does work. And the set, dominated by an artfully constructed castle interior and towering castle walls, fills the stage handsomely.

"Beauty and the Beast" continues at the Forest Theater Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays through Sept. 25. Call (831) 622-0100 or visit www.pacrep.org for show times and reservations.

MotoGP tickets going fast

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TICKETS TO next July's U.S. Red Bull Grand Prix went on sale Thursday, Sept. 1, and all deluxe packages and premier campsites are sold out. General admission tickets, paddock passes, grandstand seats, general camping, parking and a lap around the track are still available but might not be by next summer. This year's event was the first in Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca's 48-year history to sell out.

The July 21-23, 2006, U.S. Grand Prix will mark the MotoGP world championship series' second appearance on the continent after a decade-long hiatus and will coincide with the California Rodeo Salinas, promising an extraordinarily busy weekend in Monterey County.

This year, with four Americans competing in an elite field of the world's best motorcycle racers, the track hosted a record crowd of 153,653 during three days of racing. Kentuckian Nicky Hayden won his first MotoGP race that Sunday, and Texan Colin Edwards came in second. Defending champion Valentino Rossi finished third. The weekend also featured the American Motorcyclist Association national championship series. Spectators lined up to enter souvenir shops and filled prime viewing spots. Track officials anticipate sales netted significant funds for local charities, though final numbers have not been released.

Another gangbuster weekend is expected in 2006. For tickets, call (800) 327-SECA or visit www.laguna-seca.com. For information, visit www.RedBullUSGrandPrix.com.

cerned about the academic performance at the middle school and high school for several years," he said. "We have good schools in Carmel, but we should have great schools."

An outspoken critic and attendee of every board meeting during the past two-and-a-half years, Kreitman rallied parents last June to express concerns over students at the middle and high schools scoring poorly on the state's standardized tests. He said the schools ranked near the bottom when compared to institutions with similar demographics.

"It was not acceptable, given the resources and considering the quality of Carmel River School and Tularcitos, which are tops," he said.

Soon after, the district hired Mary Bull to oversee curriculum development, and teachers have worked to bring their subjects in line with state standards.

Test results released last month "were really encouraging," as they indicated students' scores improved on 30 of the 33 exams, he said, and he too praised the board and Biasotti for setting lofty goals and promoting an atmosphere of respect for academics.

"There's just no excuse for us not to have the best schools in the state," he said.

Kreitman, who lives in Carmel with his wife, Barbara, and their two sons, said parents have to become involved and insist on high standards.

"I'm continuing to press for making academics and learning the focal point of our district," he said. "I feel I basically gave us a year's head start by making a stink. And I'm not going away."

Born in New York, Kreitman attended Stanford and received a masters in agricultural economics from Cornell. He first worked with the U.S. Agency for International Development on educational programs, and he now serves as a financial consultant for Smith Barney in Salinas.

A 40-year California resident who moved to Carmel seven years ago, Kreitman said his strong auditing and budgeting skills would also be useful. He served on parent-teacher associations at River and the middle school, and he remains involved in the nonprofit Friends of Carmel Unified Schools.

"I'm running because I want these schools to be the best," he said, adding that he appreciates the incumbents' work but suspects it's time for a fresh approach. "I believe I would be the strongest advocate on the board for academic improvement and performance."

Dan Hightower

"I'm really excited about the changes that are being made and are continuing in the district," Hightower said. "Academically, we're really making movement at all levels — elementary schools, the middle school and the high school — and I'm really excited about how the facilities have been upgraded."

An interventional radiologist at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula and father of four, Hightower said he's also looking forward to passage of the $21.5 million bond the district is putting to voters in November.

"I've put in 13 long years on the school board, and I want to see my labors come to fruition," he said. "My commitment all along, from the first moment I got on the school board, is I want to provide the best opportunity for our students."

Are test scores low because the schools don't put enough emphasis on reading, writing and arithmetic?

Gratitude for the benefits of his own public schooling — he graduated from South Pasadena High School with grades good enough for a USC scholarship and then attended UCSF's medical school, where he is still a faculty member — inspired him to join the board.

"Education is something I value and have a passion for, and it's been the key to so many doors for me," he said. "I want to give the kids as many opportunities as possible."

A strong high school education will ensure students are fit to attend college or enter the working world after they graduate, he said.

"I don't really think any child is incapable of learning, and we need to put into place systems to support those who aren't performing at the levels that they should," he said.

He favors a new system for evaluating teachers that is more collaborative and stresses teaching style and methods in the classrooms.

"Our focus is going to be predominantly on academics and making all of our students achievers. We know the flagship of the district should be the high school," he said.

Hightower lives in Carmel Valley with his wife of 25 years, Lori, Tularcitos fifth grader Tierney, and Kelsey, a sophomore at Santa Catalina. Ashley attends the University of San Diego and Jessica is attending Harvard this fall.

"I've never been more excited about the future of the district than I am now," Hightower said.

Howard Given

Just completing his second term, Given hopes to be elected for another four years but said the new term would be his last.

"We've been working really hard in the district to improve our academic results and have devoted considerable resources to that end, with particular emphasis on Carmel High School," he said.

Aligning curriculum with state standards is key and has proved itself in the form of higher test scores.

He hopes the board will "raise our community's collective expectation for the performance of our school district," he said. "With our demographic profile and the resources we have, there's no reason we shouldn't be a top school performing at the very top of public high schools not only in the state, but in the country."

He said success lies in convincing parents and the community, as well as the administration and the teachers, to expect nothing less, and ensuring graduating seniors are well equipped for their next phase of life.

The high school should require its students to meet the entrance requirements set by the University of California and California State University systems, according to Given.

Special classes and more tutoring will help, as will a faculty-student mentoring program "to assure they connect," Given said. "It would be a more formalized process to ensure that when kids hit some sort of wall, there is a faculty member who knows them, understands them and can work with them to get through it."

He would also like to see the level of parental involvement that's common in lower grades occur at the high school. He hopes the high school will one day be considered "the gem at the corner of Ocean Avenue and Highway 1."

"There's a lot of positive momentum in all of these areas, and I think I'm in a position to provide the leadership to make that happen," said Given, who has also served on the Carmel Youth Center board.

Given attended public schools in Los Angeles and studied economics and international relations at UC Davis before obtaining his MBA from UCLA. He developed and sold a software company and then entered the investment business in 1984. His daughter, Bonnie, is a sophomore at Carmel High School, and his son, Sam, is attending Northwestern as a freshman this fall. Given and his wife, Janey, live in Carmel.

FIRST TEE

Championship, will play with Texan Tom Kite.

'I play with the boys'

Rees first grasped a golf club at the age of 2 after she refused to sit quietly in her stroller while her 10-and-a-half-year-old sister, Carolyn, hit golf balls at a driving range.

The Pebble Beach resident never stopped swinging, which led her to win this year's California Women's Junior Girls Amateur Championship and a host of other competitive events. She's also the only girl on P.G. High's varsity golf team, which she joined as a freshman.

"I play with the boys, and our varsity team practices at Poppy Hills," she said, adding that the undulating course can be punishing. "I've been able to keep up with the boys just fine."

She's competed with many of them since middle school, "so playing with a girl is nothing for them," she said. "They'll give me a hard time; I'll give them a hard time."

They may be more inclined to give her a hard time now that she's playing in the open, and they're not. She missed the cut by two strokes last year and was the first standby junior player.

"I was able to see what a wonderful experience it was, because I got to go to the events and stuff. I just didn't get to play," she said.

This year, she shot a 74 at Poppy Ridge in Livermore to land a spot on the roster. "It's been an ongoing goal of mine, so when I qualified, I was ecstatic."

And she hopes it will be the first of many, as she is aiming to become a touring professional.

"That's been a dream of mine ever since I was a little girl," she said. "I've been working hard to try to get better and be as competitive as I can."

'Born into golf'

Vivolo, who was born in Los Angeles but moved to Carmel a decade ago, also grabbed his first golf club at a tender age.

"I had this little putter when I was like 2," he said. "I was born into golf — it's my dream and what I would like to do."

At age 3, he was hitting buckets of balls, and he played in his first tournament when he was 7.

Vivolo has aspirations of going pro and spent his last six summers traveling around the country "playing a lot of golf," he said. "I work really hard at it, and I play pretty much every day all year round."

He finished seventh in the Junior World tournament and has placed well in American Junior Golf Association events. Vivolo received one of the 10 exemptions for young players in The First Tee Open. His travels have placed him on the famous greens of North Carolina's Pinehurst and Shinnecock Hills, the 113-year-old Southampton, N.Y., course that hosted the 2004 U.S. Open.

"I haven't been out of the country to play golf yet," Vivolo said, though he may have that opportunity as a member of Pepperdine University's team. He's already committed to play for the Southern California college next fall, and the team travels to Scotland once every four years.

But Pebble Beach remains Vivolo's favorite course, and he said he's thrilled to be playing there again in the open.

"It's an awesome commitment," he said of the effort to support The First Tee, the World Golf Foundation endeavor to teach children of all ages and backgrounds life skills through the game of golf. "I was really excited when they announced it."

'Best round of the summer'

"I didn't think I was going to make it," Patterson said of her attempt to qualify for The First Tee Open at Poppy Ridge. "I went for fun, and I played my best round of the summer."

Her 1-under score of 71 even made her a medalist.

"I was so excited. I had a good practice round, and I just tried to work on staying calm after my shots," she said. "That's what I've been working on: One shot at a time and not thinking of the outcome."

Patterson's score allowed her to keep a promise she made to herself a year ago.

"Last year, I watched The First Tee on the Golf Channel, and I really wanted to play in it," she said. She told herself she would.

Five years ago, Patterson took up the game under the guidance of Nick Nelson, "who has started just about every junior golfer on the Monterey Peninsula," said her mother, Rita. She was also inspired by Tiger Woods and already has her eye on the number of college scholarships available to female golfers.

A semifinalist in the California Women's Junior Golf Amateur, Patterson began competing in AJGA events this year and played with her fellow Santa Catalina teammates for the first time this week.

"They're really nice, and the whole golf team's going to come help at The First Tee, so I'm really excited to be there," she said.

This week also marked her first time playing Pebble Beach, where her favorite is a hole known for reducing grown men to tears.

"I really like number 6, because it's so hard, and you have to hit it perfectly, or you're in the ocean or the rough," she said.

ELECTION

And he'll have to because, last time around, Lehman received 1,261 votes to Chesshire's 999.

There are roughly 21,000 residents within District 2, an area that covers Del Rey Oaks, Sand City and chunks of Monterey and Seaside.

"I will get around to the individual neighborhoods and speak to as many groups as I can," said Chesshire, who is married and lives in Monterey.

Mailers, campaign signs and maybe a website will also be part of Chesshire's plans to promote himself, he said.

Chesshire's strong motivation to be elected again this year, he said, is in contrast to his dispirited bid four years ago.

Chesshire's brother, who was critically ill during the campaign, died three weeks after the Nov. 6, 2001, election.

He was so wrapped up in personal issues, he didn't even provide a campaign statement with the Monterey County Elections Department that year, Chesshire said. He has a statement on file this year.

Chesshire said a big challenge is motivating voters to take to the polls on Nov. 8.

"I'm standing here at my sink right now; I turn it on and there's water," he said. "People don't think they have a problem because they turn on their faucets and everything is OK."

Chesshire, a resident of Monterey for nearly 50 years, has long been a supporter of projects such as a desalination plant while Lehman has typically favored water conservation.

The District 2 race is an important one because it could drastically alter the way the seven-member board votes on contentious issues.

"Some of those votes end up being 4-3," said Monterey Mayor Dan Albert. "There is no question about it, the swing could go the other way."

Cal Am takeover?

In July, the board voted 4-3 in favor of including a ballot measure asking voters if they want to investigate a public takeover of California American Water's local system.

Board director Dave Potter said he's unsure how the board's dynamics would change if Chesshire is reelected.

"Clearly, there are differences on the board," he said of its current state. "But I think there is a respect for each other's differences, and that's refreshing."

Lehman, who voted in favor of the measure, couldn't be reached for comment. But in her campaign statement, she wrote, "I have kept the faith with those who elected me, first and foremost by always supporting the public's right to decide important water issues. I have opposed developer interests in their attempt to take over the MPWMD, to limit the public's right to vote on projects that will affect every single rate payer, and the developer's attempts to make current residents pay for the increased water needs for their new developments."

Chesshire said the Monterey Peninsula could face a troublesome future if a solution to the water problem isn't found soon.

"This whole water issue has been going on for more than 28 years, we still haven't solved the problem, and it's worse now," he said.

"We need to look to the future to provide for our communities' needs, and we need to do that in one big step, one fell swoop."

RUNOFF

the state water board is pushing for a stormwater solution. Carmel has roughly 2 million visitors a year. All of them — and their cars — add incrementally to runoff pollution, she said.

In November 2003, Carmel voters defeated a ballot measure that would have cost homeowners less than $3 dollar a month to create a stormwater district to deal with wastewater runoff.

Meurer also said it would be difficult to convince the public of the importance of modifying storm drains to redirect runoff. "Some of those objectives won't be rational to the common person on the street," he said.

But Friends of the Sea Otter Executive Director D'Anne Albers said the nonprofit group opposes any efforts to delay the board's requirements because of the negative effects pollutants can have on otters and other marine life. City representatives also called for better testing of stormwater to determine its effects on the ocean.

Kelly Richardson, an attorney with Latham & Watkins LLP, the law firm representing the Pebble Beach Company, suggested a council be formed to monitor the effects of runoff on the local environment.

"If there are adverse effects on the marine community, then appropriate steps would be taken," Richardson said. "If there are no adverse effects, then additional measures would be unnecessary."

"Everybody wants a clean bay, a clean ocean," Albert said after the workshop. "There has to be some reasonable, common-sense solution to all of this."

RELIEF

the kinds of things we're dealing with."

Nygaard is one of only 20 or 30 people in the country trained to handle such logistics between FEMA and national, state, regional and local relief efforts. But volunteers of all kinds are urgently needed, and anyone with some spare time can help, even by covering phones at the local office while other volunteers are working in the field. Four other members of the Carmel chapter — River Gurtin, Barbara Siebeneick, Dave Purvis and Robin Boehlje — are already at work in and near the disaster zones, and more will be on their way.

"I encourage people as much as possible to get involved," Nygaard said.

"We need all the support we can get," Gurtin said Wednesday from the Red Cross Emergency Response Vehicle he's driving from California to a staging area in Little Rock, Ark.

Anticipating that need, the Red Cross scheduled disaster courses at the Carmel chapter house, Dolores and Eighth, Friday, Sept. 2, from 1 to 4 p.m. and Wednesday, Sept. 8, from 1 to 4 p.m. The free training will enable volunteers to respond to all sorts of emergencies, and anyone interested should call (831) 624-6921. To donate, call 1-800-HELP NOW or mail checks to the Disaster Relief Fund, American Red Cross, P.O. Box AR, Carmel, CA 93921.

Today's Real Estate

by MAUREEN MASON

Certified Residential Specialist

HOW TO BUY BEFORE YOU SELL

Most of us need at least some of the proceeds from the sale of our current home to use as a down payment on our next home. For that reason, we find ourselves in a quandary, feeling that we can't make an offer on our next home until our current home has sold, but we can't sell our home until we've found our next home and made an accepted offer. This needn't be a quandary, though.

In a great many cases, it's possible to take out a home equity line of credit (HELOC) secured by the equity we have in our current home. We can then borrow the needed money for the down payment in order to complete the purchase of our next home. In the meantime, we can market our current home aggressively with the assistance of our real estate advisor and when it sells, we can pay off the line of credit. In the process, we will have paid very little interest on the money we needed for our down payment.

The only danger, of course, arises if our exiting home doesn't sell rather quickly. We won't want to continue making the monthly payment on that home's loan balance for long. Your trusted real estate advisor can help you determine the level of risk here. Thanks to the HELOC, transitional financing has become easy and inexpensive to arrange. It could make it possible for you to buy your dream home before someone else does! Need more information? Just call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com.

Council may hire P.G. chief to run CFD

THE CARMEL City Council will be asked Tuesday to OK a $90,000 contract with Pacific Grove Fire Chief Andrew Miller and his staff to help run CFD, which has been without a full-time chief since Bill Hill retired in 2001. After contracting with C.V. Fire Chief Sidney Reade to oversee the department, the council merged the administration of police and fire under police chief George Rawson more than a year ago. Last November, the city hired Miller to provide technical assistance to CFD for $20,000. At the council's Sept. 6 meeting, Rawson will recommended upping that amount by $70,000, which he said would have Miller and his assistant chief "engaged in daily operations and training for the Carmel Fire Department." Hiring a full-time chief for CFD, he said, would cost $155,000 to $165,000.

The council will meet at 4:30 p.m. in Carmel City Hall on Monte Verde Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues. For more information, call (831) 620-2000.

Monterey resident and RLS sophomore Harigae made history when she won the California State Women's Amateur in 2001 at the age of 12. The youngest to ever achieve that feat, she went on to win it another three straight years. The 15-year-old, whose parents own Takara Sushi in Pacific Grove, also made the final 16 in the U.S. Women's Amateur this year and last.

Harigae played in last year's First Tee Open, when she was paired with Tom Watson, and received an exemption from qualifying for the 2005 tournament.

"I'm excited to play it again this year, because the Champions Tour players are great role models in golf, and in life in general," she said.

Harigae was 8 when she and her mother began learning golf. She participated in a Salvation Army clinic and then took instruction at Del Rey Oaks.

"And I just picked it up from there," she said.

Harigae enjoys playing Poppy Hills, "because of the people there, and it's always in really good shape," but she said exclusive Cypress Point is her favorite.

"It was so beautiful when I played there," she said.

The First Tee Open began this week with practice rounds, and tournament play commences Friday at Pebble Beach Golf Links and Del Monte Golf Course. Sunday's final round will have all 78 pros and 22 top-scoring juniors playing at Pebble, with the remaining juniors and 28 top-scoring amateur teams at Del Monte. Play will be televised on the Golf Channel, with the final Pebble Beach round also airing on NBC at noon. Call (800)541-9091 or (831)644-0333 for tickets, and visit www.thefirstteeopen.com for information. Ticket purchasers will also be entered into a drawing for a round of golf at Pebble Beach.

Everybody Needs a Break Now and Then

Even the most dedicated of family caregivers periodically need some "time off" in order to replenish their energy and renew their spirits. But their commitment is so great that they have difficulty giving themselves permission to take a break.

Besides, the logistics — and the worry — involved in finding a qualified substitute or in taking their loved one to a care facility can be overwhelming.

We can help.

Our Home Care Coordinator will visit you to discuss your needs and wishes. Then, when the time comes, we will carefully select a Personal Attendant to be at home with your loved one while you are away, and to follow the routine that you have established. We'll do everything possible to make this temporary absence comfortable for your loved one and for you. It's worth a try, isn't it? Because you can't take good care of anyone else unless you take care of yourself.

OPINION

Editorial

The ADA juggernaut

THEY'RE PROUD of the hundreds of handicapped-accessibility lawsuits they've filed, and they're primed to file plenty more.

That was the unmistakable message delivered in a Santa Barbara County courtroom last week by San Francisco attorney Thomas Frankovich as he responded to softball questions from a judge who inexplicably seemed to be on his side.

A case in point: Frankovich and his disabled client, Jarek Molski, have used a generous California statute to scare the pants off anybody they decide to sue. The law, which is intended to severely punish anyone who deliberately violates another person's civil rights, allows the victim of such discrimination to seek $4,000-a-day damages for as long as the discriminatory behavior continues.

In hundreds of cases, Molski and Frankovich outrageously exploited this law for their own benefit by waiting a full year before filing a discrimination suit.

Thus, the owner of a restaurant whose parking lot wasn't properly striped or whose bathroom had grab bars that were too far from the floor, wasn't notified of these supposed ADA violations as soon as Molski took note of them on one of his frequent sojourns up and down the California coast.

Instead, the alleged violation continued and the restaurant owner blithely went about his business, unaware that a very costly meter was ticking.

And then one day the legal papers arrived, and the owner found out that Molski believed his year of silence entitled him to a payment of at least $1.5 million for something that happened one year before.

A federal judge cited this behavior as strong evidence that Molski and Frankovich were running a scam. Last winter, Frankovich argued that the demand wasn't sincere, and that he never expected to collect so much. The federal judge saw this answer, too, as evidence that Frankovich's tactic was to scare business owners into quickly settling for $15,000 or $25,000. It certainly couldn't have been his intention to have the violations corrected for the benefit of the handicapped, the judge observed.

Last week, as a state judge considered whether to join the federal judge in sanctioning the two infamous litigants, Frankovich took a new tack:

"It's not for me to say it's wrong for Molski to receive $4,000 a day if that's what the law provides," he said to Santa Barbara County Superior Court Judge Zel Canter.

Frankovich, of course, was being self-serving. Nevertheless, his comment hit the nail on the head. It is our legislators' fault that this ridiculous ADA lawsuit juggernaut, which harms the disabled community at least as much as small business owners, is allowed to continue.

Thank goodness there are at least a few judges willing to try to slow it down.

Letters to the Editor

Molski not welcome

Dear Editor,

Concerning your article Aug. 26 about Jarek Molski, the disabled man who has sued so many businesses throughout our state:

Get a life pal. In my eyes, you're an embarrassment to the disabled community.

Don't say I have no idea what you're talking about, because I do. I, too, am disabled and have encountered many incidences where easier access would have made a difference, but I never went so far as to consider suing someone. I've written to several bus companies simply because the disabled seating is virtually a free-for-all for anyone besides us. But I would never consider suing. My disability comes from being hit by a truck and nearly killed. In the ambulance the paramedics had to intubate me twice because I had quit breathing. A nurse at the hospital had to cut a hole in my throat to insert a tracheal tube because I had quit breathing for the third time. During one of those situations my left vocal chord was scraped and now badly scarred. Now my voice is badly damaged — but, hey, I'm alive. A walking miracle. I could look into suing but that would be an insult to the doctors who saved my life, so now, even though my income is Social Security, I don't need to get rich. Sounds like you do. I guess you've never heard that "The last shall be first." Read it. Learn it. Live it. I'm sure our mayor and police want to say it but can't so I will. Consider yourself banned from Carmel. We don't need or want your presence. 86ed. Scram. Beat it! Don't ever visit here again.

A buyer for Marsh's?

Dear Editor,

Thank you Pine Cone for continuing to draw your readers' attention to our area's historic resources. After all, these treasures are one of the chief reasons residents and visitors alike love the special atmosphere of the Peninsula. But it seems to me that the recent editorial on Marsh's Oriental Art & Antiques in Monterey misses the mark.

Over the past few years a large (and growing) number of citizens have expressed concern that this landmark building (the distinctive gateway to Monterey for over three-quarters of a century) has been neglected to the point that it has become an embarrassment to our community.

Although we can debate whether Marsh's is an attractive building (remember, beauty is in the eye of the beholder), each Peninsula city has wisely established a commission whose special responsibility is to advise us in matters affecting our historic treasures. In the case of Marsh's, California's State Historic Resources Commission recently unanimously agreed with Monterey's Historic Preservation Commission that it should be protected because of its unique architecture and recommended that it be declared eligible for the National Register of Historic Places.

The "word on the street" is that there are buyers out there willing to purchase and restore Marsh's. The proverbial "win-win" would be for the Diocese of Monterey to sell Marsh's so that a new use can be found for Marsh's that would preserve it and, at the same time, provide the Diocese with the resources it so sorely needs to save the Royal Presidio Chapel, another of its historic buildings at risk.

Thanks for the Memories

Dear Editor,

What a lucky gal I have been! In April of this year I was asked to be the Interim City Clerk for the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea. How do you turn down an assignment such as this! I indeed made the right decision by taking it on for five-months.

I have been in the city clerk profession for 40 years, with the last five years being a contract clerk and never have I been so impressed as I've been having the opportunity to work with the staff and city council here. The positive energy and teamwork that I have observed was so unlike most municipalities I've worked with. It's a "lean machine" with a downsized staff that takes on any task with little questioning.

I will take home fond memories of everyone that I met and worked with during my stay. Particular thanks to Rich Guillen, who has to be the best City Administrator around. And believe me, I've worked with several. His openness and honesty are to be praised. Special thanks to Sandy Farrell, Stephanie Pearce, Jane Miller and Karen Love for always being there to answer silly everyday questions about where to go and how to get there. I couldn't have done it without them!

Being a native of California I've been visiting Carmel-by-the-Sea since I was a youngster and remember its beauty, however, as an adult I leave with even stronger memories of a community that knows how to work together.

As I have related to many: "It's not quite heaven, but it has the same zip code!" Thanks for a great time!

BUTCH EDMUNDSON, 4, is the alpha male dog of the Carmel Dachshund Club, of which his dad, Kim, is founder and president.

Butch has been a member since its creation two years ago, as has his brother, Spike, 9. The popular group meets the first and third Sunday of every month. They gather at Eighth Avenue and Scenic Road at 11 a.m., proceed down the walking path on leash, then descend to the beach at the 12th Avenue stairs. There, unleashed, they play and romp – a charming sight to see. All dachshunds are invited to join this lively group.

Spike and Butch march in the Carmel-by-the-Sea birthday parade the last Saturday in October. They also attend the annual Dachshund Club wienie roast on Carmel Beach the third Sunday in May which more than 70 dachshunds attend. They are not lacking for friends or social events.

Dad Kim describes Butch as a "total dachshund" – rambunctious, friendly, protective – with the added attributes of a strong swimmer, a goose and deer chaser, and the zen-like ability to maintain focus on the activity of the moment.

Once, swimming in Carmel River, Butch decided to chase a gaggle of geese and wound up swimming eastward in the reedy canals. So focused was Butch, he didn't heed Dad's calls to return, and was out of sight by the time Dad plunged in to retrieve him. Dad finally caught up, and returned Butch, gooseless, to the safer shores of River Beach.

Tuesday morning, Spike didn't choose to come with Butch and Dad to Carmel Beach, but instead preferred to stay home with Mom Michelle and reap the glories of her undivided attention.

The two dachsies share a comfy bed in the laundry room, but come Saturday morning, they're invited to romp on Dad and Mom's bed in pure ecstasy. Could life be any better?

Fort Ord's insulation made him sick, man's lawsuit claims

By KELLY NIX

A FORMER U.S. National Guard trainee who worked at Fort Ord in the 1970s filed a civil lawsuit claiming he came down with asbestos-related diseases after being exposed to insulation while stationed at the military base.

In a 5-inch-thick pile of court documents filed in Monterey County Superior Court Aug. 18, Paul Smith, 51, blames insulation used at Fort Ord as well as a litany of other products that contributed to his asbestosis and asbestos-related lung disease, which he was diagnosed with in October 2004.

Smith, of Richmond, was stationed at Fort Ord from 1974 to 1975. According to his lawsuit, he was exposed to asbestos provided by the Emeryville-based Plant Insulation Company.

Court documents do not outline specifically how he might have been exposed to the carcinogen.

The lawsuit also names Ford Motor Company, Daimler/Chrysler, Honda Motor Company and Bridgestone/Firestone Tires as being liable for his illnesses. The civil suit is so broad it lists as defendants dozens of companies that manufactured or sold asbestos-containing products — from brake shoes to mufflers. Smith, a laborer and automobile mechanic, worked on cars and used numerous products that contained asbestos or asbestos products, he claims.

The lawsuit, which doesn't specify damages, states Smith's father's employment was also to blame for his poor health. Smith says he was regularly exposed to asbestos-containing products as a child, because his father would come home with asbestos on his clothing and play with him.

Brayton Purcell LLP, a Novato-based firm that specializes in personal injury cases, recently won a $3.4 million jury ruling for a 70-year-old man who got colon cancer while exposed to asbestos at work, according to the firm's website.

THE PRESERVE LAND COMPANY

Cottage of the month

TUCKED INTO the wooded area of upper Carmel, a tiny, pristine, white cottage can be found ... and it looks as if it came right out of "Alice in Wonderland."

Constructed in 1927 as an artists' studio, the original structure was just 10 feet by 14 feet. In time, with the cleverness of builders, the size was increased by one-third; all of the additions were sympathetic to the original structure, and done with integrity. Added spaces were to the rear of the studio.

Combined with the fine artistic taste of the current owners, Albert and Maxine Blood, the interior is done in the lovely style of Pierre Deux.

Drive or hike the area and appreciate the many charms of Carmel's cottages.

This studio, named "Morning Glory," can be found hiding as the Sixth house, southwest of Mountain View on Crespi. Enjoy!

The owners of this 2 bed, 2 bath home told me to price this to sell quickly. At $1,200,000 I'm surprised it isn't gone! It needs no remodeling – kitchen & baths are done – landscaping is mature & complete. The den/office & breakfast nook overlook the rear patio and the oversized living/dining room features a large brick fireplace. Hurry – to 1st Ave. just east of Torres.

About Wal-Mart: Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., operates Wal-Mart Stores, Supercenters, Neighborhood Markets and SAM'S CLUBS in all 50 states. Internationally, the company operates in Puerto Rico, Canada, China, Mexico, Brazil, Germany, United Kingdom, Argentina and South Korea. The company's securities are listed on the New York and Pacific stock exchanges under the symbol WMT. Last year, Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., contributed more than $150 million to support communities and local non-profit organizations. Customers and associates raised an additional $70 million.

About The First Tee: The First Tee is an initiative of the World Golf Foundation which, since its inception in 1997, has opened 208 golf-learning facilities and has introduced the game of golf to over 450,000 participants. The focus is to give young people of all backgrounds an opportunity to develop, through golf and character education, life-enhancing values such as honesty, integrity and sportsmanship.

About the Champions Tour: The Champions Tour is a tax-exempt membership organization of professional golfers age 50 and older. Conceived in 1980 as the Senior PGA Tour, it started with just four events and purses totaling $475,000. The Champions Tour now has 28 official events offering a minimum of $50.3 million in prize money in 2005 and its highest average purse ever of $1.8 million. The Champions Tour's primary purpose is to provide significant competitive and earnings opportunities for players age 50 and older, to protect the integrity of the game, and to help the game grow in the U.S. and around the world. In addition to providing competitive opportunities for its membership, Champions Tour events also generate significant sums of money for charity, raising $970 million since the first donation was made in 1938, with the $1 billion milestone expected to be reached later this year. The commissioner of the PGA TOUR is Tim Finchem. Rick George is president of the Champions Tour, which is headquartered in Ponte Vedra Beach, Florida. Its web site address is www.pgatour.com.

About the Monterey Peninsula Foundation: In 1937, Bing Crosby invited a group of friends to get together for some golf, a clambake and, most importantly, to raise money for local charities. Since that time, the tournament, now known as the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, has become one of the most popular and internationally recognized stops on the PGA TOUR and has raised over $50 million for nonprofit organizations in Monterey County and surrounding communities. The Monterey Peninsula Foundation also conducts the Wal-Mart First Tee Open at Pebble Beach on the Champions Tour with proceeds dedicated to The First Tee.

2005 Wal Mart First Tee Open

First Tee still homeless on The Monterey Peninsula

■ Salinas venue draws crowds

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

A NATIONWIDE program designed to attract youngsters from all backgrounds to the game of golf still doesn't have a home on the Monterey Peninsula but, after years of trying, hopes to have a local First Tee chapter open before the beginning of 2006.

"We are talking with a variety of people about a variety of venues," said Cathy Scherzer, director of marketing for this week's Wal Mart First Tee Open.

The Monterey Peninsula Foundation, which hosts the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am every year and is also behind The First Tee Open, spent years and more than half a million dollars trying to open an 18-hole course and teaching center in Seaside.

The city council approved the plans for land on the former Fort Ord, but attached 63 permit conditions and 61 mitigation measures. Then, a contentious group of residents threatened to tie the project up in court, even as lease negotiations, architectural review, adoption of a habitat conservation plan and other impediments put its opening years away.

"We've spent considerable dollars on this — way more than originally budgeted," said foundation executive vice president Ollie Nutt. "As good stewards, we couldn't see continuing with a project that had such an uncertain future."

Then he opened serious negotiations with the U.S. Navy about using Monterey Pines — located behind the Monterey Fairgrounds.

In talks that began late last year, Nutt proposed refurbishing an old clubhouse and pro shop and adding a couple of classrooms in exchange for use of the practice areas and course during certain hours. The old clubhouse and pro shop would also be renovated by First Tee.

"The Navy would continue to operate the course on a normal basis," Nutt said, including scheduling tee-times for military and nonmilitary players.

In the meantime, to serve the county's 77,000 residents between the ages of 7 and 17, The First Tee took over operations of the City of Salinas' Twin Creeks golf course in 2003, even as it looked on the Peninsula for a site.

"Many say golf is a metaphor for life: There are the good bounces and the bad bounces," said Joe Louis Barrow Jr., executive director of The First Tee. "I have the greatest job in golf to be able to see what we're doing and how we're impacting the lives of young people."

He cited university studies showing parents observing increased confidence, communication skills, responsibility and grades in their kids after they joined The First Tee.

Nutt hopes a Peninsula First Tee program will be as well attended and popular as the Twin Creeks course, which is "as busy as we can handle."

With hundreds of kids enrolled, he said the greatest challenge is recruiting enough volunteers and getting them trained.

Classes at Twin Creeks are held Monday through Friday afternoons and all day Saturday.

Volunteers should have golfing experience, but it isn't absolutely necessary, not only because so many of the kids have never picked up a golf club, but because so many other administrative tasks are also handled by volunteers.

To sign up, call (831) 442-6922.

- Summary of community involvement, awards/recognitions and extracurricular activities.

"We look forward to welcoming these extraordinary young people to Pebble Beach for the second annual Wal-Mart First Tee Open at Pebble Beach," said Tournament Director Ollie Nutt. "No other sport can offer this incredible opportunity to play side by side with the legends of the game."
